XML has become an irreplaceable standard to exchange data over the Web. Strongly used in the industry of IT's, it's now one of the main components of Web applications, information systems, data integration, e-commerce (mainly B2B)... Through its many languages, XML can be used to define data structures and check data validity, to transform data and to expose it using different data formats (XML, CSV, SOAP). XML is also strongly used in services oriented architectures. This seminar gives you an XML overview so that you could better appreciate its use in your own information systems and web applications.
